NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Ramsay MacDonald Coming to Washington for World Peace Conference.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

RAMSAY MACDONALD, new prime minister of Great Britain, is planning to visit the United States to confer with President Hoover, in regard to naval armament reduction and enforcing the Kellogg pact outlawing war by land action of the English speaking peoples. In Washington the news of this plan was well received, and it was learned at the White House that Mr. Hoover would be glad to meet Mr. MacDonald and discuss with him questions of mutual interest to the two countries. American Ambassador Davies, on his way to England, was apprised of this development by radio and almost immediately after his arrival in London he went to Scotland for a conference with the prime minister who was taking a ten days' vacation at his home in Lossiemouth. Mr. Davies was expected to deliver to Mr. MacDonald an invitation to visit Washington and hold there a conference with President Hoover and Prime Minister MacDonald, King of Canada. The host guess in London was that the trip would be made about the end of July after the session of parliament adjourned.

According to London correspondents, Mr. MacDonald said: "Mr. President Hoover invites me to Washington. I am going to answer 'I will go.' I shall hope to settle this question of Anglo-American relations once and for all." It was asserted he hopes to carry the discussion much further than naval subjects. He believes the world is entering on an era of great industrial and financial combines whose boundaries will cut across all national frontiers, and he is desirous of a discussion on economic cooperation and avoidance of cut throat competition in foreign markets. Mr. MacDonald as a Socialist, welcomes the wedding of industry into trusts and sees no objection to the spread of trusts to the international field under proper governmental control.

JUST when it appeared that the farm relief bill as drafted up by the house and senate conference and approved by the President had clear sailing the senate passed things all up by rejecting the conference report by a vote of 43 to 46 because the export debenture feature had been eliminated. In this step the Democrats were joined by 13 Republicans, all based on radicals except Cousins of Michigan. The debenture advocates not only stood by their scheme, but they were especially determined to force the house to go on record on this feature of the measure.

President Hoover immediately called leaders of the house and senate to the White House and a program was agreed upon. This was to send the bill back to conference as the senate acted, and to have the conference agree on their original report, after which it was expected the house would reject the debenture plan by a comfortable margin and accept the conference report. There appeared to be no doubt that the senate also would adopt the report of the conference after the house had rejected the debenture by a vote of 43 to 46.

The most interesting feature of the affair was the unexpected threat of Senator Brewster of Iowa that a letter into the congressional campaign next year and the Presidential campaign of 1936 in the debenture were not included in either the farm bill or the new farm bill. He asserted the debenture was more than the senate was to do in the stages in obtaining farm legislation.

Similar threats were begun by the senate Finance committee, and Senator Weston Jones told the senate this week should be regarded with a view to securing the enactment of the farm bill early in the fall, and therefore congress should recess for only a brief time. But Senator Watson, majority leader, expressed the belief that the tariff bill would not be finally acted upon until just before the regular December session.

SIGNATURE of the Young plan for German reparations payments by the seven interested nations is having speedy result in the way of settling other post-war problems. The council of the League of Nations met in Madrid, and the Germans carried out their plan of bringing before it the matter of early evacuation of the Rhineland. Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, proposed that an international conference be held this summer for the handling of all outstanding questions left over from the war, and this was agreed to by Dr. Gustav Stresemann, German minister of foreign affairs. Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain already had indicated that he was willing to participate in such a meeting. It was generally believed that the conference would be held in July, probably in London or The Hague.

It had been supposed that the council at this Madrid session would take up the vexatious question of national minorities, but Stresemann insisted it should be referred to the World Court at The Hague. This was strongly opposed by Briand and the representatives of the secession states, and a compromise was reached by which the matter was held over for the September session of the League assembly.

French Socialists in convention at Nancy declared in favor of the Young reparations plan, evacuation of the Rhineland and immediate ratification of the Mellon-Bernander accord for the payment of the French debt to the United States. Certain of the United States senators led by Howell of Nebraska have attacked the Young plan as "another move by the allies and the international bankers" to cancel not only the war debts but also the interest on the allied obligations to America. Administration leaders and State department officials asserted nothing in the Young settlement would affect the war debts owed the United States. J. P. Morgan, one of the American experts, declared an arrival in New York that the bank for international settlements, to be established under the Young plan, would be the greatest instrument for the preservation of world peace yet devised.

PRESIDENT HOOVER, because he used to be secretary of commerce, was especially interested in the ceremony of laying the cornerstone of the new department of commerce building. Surrounded by many other high government officials, he watched the trowel that was used by President Washington in laying the cornerstone of the Capitol 133 years ago, and in his address he said the event marked the emergence of the commerce department into full maturity and service. The building will be the largest single public structure in Washington and in its actual floor space will be the largest office building in the world. It is to be the most important structure in the government's $115,000,000 program for public buildings in the city of Washington.

NEARLY every day the quick moving enforcers of prohibition furnish some ammunition for the foes of Volsteadism. Last week they killed an apparently innocent citizen at International Falls, Minn., and a young man at Detroit whose companions advised him to get out of the car when they saw a band of liquor from Canada. Twice in congress took the opportunity to denounce the activities of prohibition officers and Representatives of Michigan demanded an investigation of the Detroit case, but after a trip to that city he said the shooting was justified. Represents the House a Kalm of California to resolve a bill in the house directing the treasury to pay $25,000 to the representative of every person "wantonly and maliciously killed by any person" after not acting in self defense. Other congressmen urged that the treasury forbid the use of firearms by dry agents, but Seymour Lawrence, assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of all prohibition enforcement agencies, said this could not be done. He declared that agents had been cautioned for more than a year against reckless use of firearms, and that he did not see what more could be done to prevent killings without crippling enforcement.

Two officers of Hopkinton, Ky., who were convicted for killing a man in a prohibition raid were denied a new trial by Federal Judge Dawson in Louisville. In Silver City, N. M., a dry agent induced a bootlegger to sell him liquor and the latter was shot by other agents as he was making the delivery. Angered by the dry raid at Ripon, Wis., during the celebration of the Republican party's seventy-fifth birthday, Assemblyman Lamoreaux of Ashland county introduced a resolution asking the federal government to desist from attempting to enforce the Eighteenth amendment in the Badger state. About the same time dry agents raided the favorite drug store of Wisconsin's wet legislators in Madison.

Mr. Lowman has ordered heavy reinforcements for the dry enforcers of the Detroit area, in the way of both men and boats. In response to this the big rum runners of the Great Lakes met in Ecorse and laid plans to operate in unison. They adopted a shuttle system whereby traffic will be diverted to Lake Erie or Lake Huron when the enforcers are concentrated on the Detroit river, and they also have devised an elaborate intelligence system and began buying larger and better boats.

These are just a few of the wet and dry developments that take up vast space in the columns of the metropolitan dailies.

UNLESS all indications are wrong, peace between Mexico's government and the Roman Catholic church will be declared in the near future. Archbishop Ruiz of Michoacan and Bishop Pascual Diaz of Tabasco held conferences with President Portes Gil in Chapultepec castle as the climax of long negotiations, and there was good reason to believe they arrived at an understanding which would need only the approval of the Pope. In well informed quarters in Mexico City it was asserted the basis of the agreement was mutual consent for a broad interpretation of the country's religious laws, both sides making concessions.

THREE United States district judges sitting en banc in Chicago found the Standard Oil Company of Indiana and fifty-one associated companies guilty of violating the Sherman antitrust act by pooling their so-called "oil cracking" processes. The decision which granted the government a permanent injunction restraining the defendant companies from further violations of the law, came after more than four years' litigation. In the original suit, filed in 1925 the government claimed the defendants conspired to restrain trade and create a monopoly by refusing independent concern the right to use their Burton "cracking" process, used to extract gasoline from crude oil. In defense the Standard of Indiana held that the process had been of vast benefit to consumers and had materially lowered the price of gasoline.

THREE Swedish aviators started to fly from Stockholm to New York, but a broken gas feed pipe forced them to land on the coast of Iceland. They got their plane to Reykjavik and last week made three attempts to fly from there to Greenland but were driven back each time by rough weather. The aviators, Ahrenburg, Floden and Ljungblad, are trying to establish a new air trade route between Europe and America.

GALVESTON'S International "pageant of pathos" came to an end with the awarding of the title "Miss Universe" to Pauline L. Goddard of Vienna, Austria, the young governess being adjudged the most beautiful of all the contestants. Miss Irene Ahlberg of New York was named "Miss United States." The affair did not come off without a small scandal, for Theda Deliry, "Miss Tolson" who was selected for ninth prize was accused of being really the "Miss Houston" of two years ago and therefore ineligible as a former contestant.

To Their Mutual Advantage

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS
(Copyright.)

MYRA was nearly distracted wondering what she could do with her small sister with the imminent approach of school vacation. Had it not been for the number of business men coming in throughout the day to Myra's office she felt she might have had the tot beside her while she earned her daily bread. It was simply out of the question to have a small girl surrounded with her dolls and other amusements necessary to childhood playing about the office while her big sister essayed to give correct prices, dates of shipment and other details incumbent upon the carrying out of a successful merchandise business.

"Whatever am I going to do with that child?" questioned Myra of herself for the hundredth time. "I would never know what she might be given to eat or what mischief she might be up to at my boarding house while I am here. I have a good notion to face the Lion's Den and ask that crochety old landlord of mine if he won't let me use the vacant office next mine as a sort of nursery."

She went out into the corridor and along to the office of the usually irate old gentleman who had charge of the renting of the offices. It was just the other side of the vacant one.

Myra went in prepared to have something akin to a fight in order to get what she wanted.

"Oh, isn't Mr. Ramage in?" she inquired of the nonirate, noncrochety young man who greeted her.

"No, Mr. Ramage got a bit too much for the tenants of the building so they've put me here instead. I suppose you are one of my tenants." And John Gardner smiled as if the idea was pleasing.

Myra smiled, too. Her mission was not going to be quite so difficult as she had anticipated.

"I have come to ask a favor." She hesitated while she probed her acute brain for the most likely manner of approach toward this nice young man's sympathy with her cause. "I wanted very much to know whether or not I could make temporary use of the small vacant office next door. I can't afford to rent the two and don't even require it except for a couple of months. I have a little girl who will be left to the mercy of a boarding-house keeper during the day while I must be at business and I thought maybe," and just here, Myra lifted wistful eyes and gazed into the young man's own, "you might let me use that only while Tots is having her school vacation."

Young Gardner felt that he would let Myra have most anything she wanted. He felt suddenly grieved against a fate that seemed always to marry off the most wonderful specimens of the feminine world.

"But you don't look old enough to have a child that goes to school," was what he actually answered.

Myra blushed brilliantly.

"But I'm not married," she said demurely, "and in consequence the child is not mine, Tots," and again her eyes lifted, and this time they filled young Gardner with great joy and a feeling that fate after all was pretty darn fine at times. "Tots is my baby sister and she and I are all alone in the world and I have to work for a living. That is why I am forced to ask this great kindness from you."

"It's a fine idea," said Gardner, "and it gives me the same idea. I have a youngster just coming home from school and she will need some one to play with during the day. Suppose I have a few bits of furniture, a rug and a few chairs, brought down so the kiddies can have a sort of nursery where we can keep our eye on them. You won't mind Tots sharing the play room, will you?"

"Goodness me, no," laughed Myra, but somehow she felt as if a cloud had drifted over the sun. Just when she was beginning to think that the very rightest man had drifted across the horizon of her heart she found him to be married and the father of a child.

"I've been pretty near nutty," laughed young Gardner, "wondering what I could do with the kiddie when she gets home for the holidays. I promised my sister who is abroad this summer that I would take charge of the little girl but blast if I knew what a pickle it was going to land me in. But you—" and Gardner's glance was more than flattering—in fact so much so that Myra found herself blushing furiously again—"you have solved the problem. I think it a corking good arrangement. And I say," he added by way of direct inspiration, "it might be a good idea, too, if you were to accompany me to lunch each day while the kiddies are here so that I won't go astray in the feeding of my sister's child—it would no doubt be disastrous if I were left to select her food."

"I feel quite certain it would," laughed Myra. She held out a slim hand and smiled sweetly. "It is really very good of you to help me out this way. I feel tremendously relieved."

"It isn't even a marker on how I feel," laughed Gardner, gripping the slim fingers in a quite elongated clasp. "Don't you think we should start this noon looking for a suitable place to take children to lunch?" "You're very, very thoughtful," said Myra.

NORTH WOODSTOCK

Mrs. John Homingway has been spending a few days in Lewiston with relatives.

The school children with their teacher, Everett Cole, their mothers and a few invited friends, enjoyed a fine picnic at Sand Pond, Milton, last Friday. All kinds of stunts and races were held and at noon a picnic dinner was held. Delicious ice cream and ice cold lemonade were also served. Mr. Cole is to be congratulated on getting up such a fine time. We understand this is his last term as he intends going away to school. The children and parents feel a sense of loss as Mr. Cole has been a faithful teacher, uniting in his efforts to benefit the school.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Elliott of Rumford called at Herman Fuller's.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Cole and family and James Knight and Elizabeth Cole spent Sunday at Songo Pond, Bethel.

Phoebe Brooks spent the week end at her grandfather's, Mr. Shortridge's, South Paris.

Edgar Davis has a Chevrolet sedan.

Mrs. Electa Davis is improving nicely from her recent operation.

Maxine Fuller, Mrs. Willsons and Miss Emma McIntire, all of Hotel Stanley, Dixfield, called at Herman Fuller's Saturday evening. They later attended the dance at Locke's Mills Pavilion.

Lloyd Fuller is working on State road during vacation.

George Abbott is not improving as his friends would like to see him. He has been suffering lately with eye trouble.

UPTON

Mr. and Mrs. H. I. Abbott and Mr. Mrs. Lee Abbott spent the week end with relatives and friends in Canada.

Mrs. Leslie Fuller and children have gone to Littleton, N. H., to keep house for Mrs. Vera Abbott for a while.

Chas. Taylor and crew from Frye, are building the State road, beginning where he left off last year. He expects to build through to the State line, which will complete the State Road in Upton.

Perry Judkins has finished his work on the Steamer Rowell at Upper Dam and returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Oscar Judkins and young daughter of West Pawlet, Vermont, were guests of his father and mother over the week end. Monday afternoon they left for Lake Tripp, where they will spend the summer.

Cleo Brown and Alton Hammond are home, having finished work on the Steamer Diamond on Lake Umbagog.

Miss Leita Brown, who has been in the hospital at Lewiston for several weeks, is home. She is gaining slowly.

Lyman Lane and George Thomas were guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Lane over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Fuller and young son have gone to Portland to visit relatives.

Miss Mae Jacobs of Boston is in town working on her piece on Lane Hill.

The Red Spot Fishing Club camps are opened up. A few guests have arrived.

Fore Street, Oxford

Mrs. Charles Stanton has gone to Massachusetts to visit her sister. E. Stanton took her as far as Portland and they met her there.

Mrs. Albert Thompson is in a hospital in Lewiston and was operated on for appendicitis Monday. Jan. is with her grandmother, Mrs. Joe Thompson.

Alvin Lovejoy is working for F. H. Goldsmith of South Paris.

Quite a number of people from the street went down to see the G. T. B. wreck. It was a big loss as the yard and eggs also ice cream was over the ground.

At Twitchell and wife entertained through the conference day which was held at the Adventist in Oxford, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis and daughter from Bridgton, also.

Fred Johnson from Swan's Island and Mr. E. E. Twitchell's son-in-law were Rev. Horner's guests from Bridgton, also Mr. I. from Bridgton and Mrs. from W. village.

Moras Reynolds has been talking E. E. Twitchell with his relatives this week.

Carrie Kingman from South Waterford, a girlhood friend of Mrs. E. E. Twitchell, visited her the first of the week. Both seemed to have a good time talking over old times when they were young.

Mrs. Flora Cummings only stayed at home one night then she was called to Welchville to keep house for her friend, Dennis Dorey, whose wife was with her daughter, in Massachusetts, for a few weeks.

The Judkins from Upton were called on some of the Twitchell's last Saturday and Sunday.

NORTH WATERFORD

Will Bird and Nell Flint motored to Laconia, N. H., Wednesday and returned Thursday.

Sunday a game of baseball was played at Jowett field between North Waterford and Locke Mills, resulting in a score of 8 to 6 in favor of North Waterford. There is to be another game there next Sunday.

THE TOWN DOCTOR

(The Doctor of Towns)

SAYS

CIVIC LOYALTY IS A FINE- SOUNDING PHRASE

It is a fine, high-sounding phrase—Civic Loyalty. It makes good text for a lot of oratory and columns upon columns of newspaper editorials, but after all there is no difference between Civic Loyalty and any other kind of loyalty.

Whole books have been written on the subject; any number of sermons preached on it; and thousands of people have been talking about it. Still, what is it? Perhaps it is better to say: "What isn't it?"

The city in which you live is your city. Its institutions are yours; its life your family's and your children's; and besides, you are a part of it, in fact, you are the city. Such being the case, you do not want to be disloyal to it, for the worst of all is disloyalty to one's self. The man who is disloyal to his town is disloyal to himself and to all that is best in him. He is his own enemy, for he undermines his character and thus deprives his efforts of that incentive which is the most powerful of all factors.

Your loyalty or disloyalty makes the place where you live what it is or what it is not, and you can not pass the buck to "George," the neighbor or prohibition.

You expect your city to be a good place to live in. You want it to be a place where you can get "hot up" and demand that it be such a place. But it is a good place only if you yourself do that which is necessary to make it so, and to do that you have to be loyal to it, stick up for it, stand by it, and if necessary, fight for it.

Loyalty requires a personal effort on all with whom a loyal person comes in contact. A man is loyal to his family, friends, town, country and to his God and will never be troubled with indecision on the part of others. There is no such thing as a free lunch. Whatever Civic Loyalty is, it is not a thing which can be bought or sold. It is a thing which you can buy if you are willing to give for it, and you can lose it if you are not.

Remember, your city is your city. It is not only the city in which you live, but it is the city in which you are born, and it is the city in which you will die.

Remember, your city is your city. It is not only the city in which you live, but it is the city in which you are born, and it is the city in which you will die.

Tune, "Reveler," "The Old Refrain."
Today we bid farewell to thee, dear Gould,
Upon our lips one song, "Farewell, Dear School."

The days we've spent with thee,
How dear they'll be—
For every yesterday a memory,
Whatever life may bring, whatever it holds—
Victory, defeat—yet we must reach our goal.

Life's measured always by the things we do;
We give our youth to make our dreams come true.
Dear Gould, you've given us a guiding star,
We'll not forget no matter where we are.

Remembering in all that we may do
Success must mean "To thine own self be true."
To teachers tried and true, we bid adieu,
We'll ever praise the noble work you do.

Faithful to your ideals we'll ever remain,
We end only to begin again.
Dear Gould, you stand for all in life that's best,
Can we in some tomorrow stand the test?

True to one motto we can reach our aim,
"We build for character and not for fame."
Dear Gould, to thee we'll faithful ever remain,
Each year will find us back with thee again.

Today will ever be a memory,
Farewell, dear Gould, Farewell to thee.

ALUMNI LUNCHEON
The Alumni Luncheon was held at the Marion True Gehring Students Home. The delicious repast under the direction of Mrs. Mary Chapman, catered at the dormitory, was enjoyed by one hundred fifty-two alumni and friends, ranging in age from the sixteen-year-old graduates to those who had passed the four score years.

F. D. Merrill, president of Alumni Association, conducted the business meeting and acted as toastmaster.

The following officers were elected for the coming year:
President Robert Hastings
Vice-President Mrs. A. Van Den Kerckhoven
Secretary and Treasurer—Miss Carrie Wright

Executive Committee—Mrs. W. T. Twaddle, H. H. Hastings, Mrs. Lawrence Lord, Louis Van Den Kerckhoven, Mrs. E. P. Lyon, Miss Faye Sanborn, Frederick Clark.

The secretary reported that the Alumni Scholarship Fund established last year had reached the goal of $1,000 with a good nucleus for another thousand.

In accordance with the suggestion made last year an effort was made for special reunions of every fifth year class counting back from the present year. Replies natives were received from the classes of '04, '09, '14, '19, '24. The responses from these classes though brief contained the essence of health and interest in the school.

A telegram from Mr. Bingham and Dr. and Mrs. B. being read by Prof. Henson was a very graceful and good message for a happy and successful commencement.

The secretary was in excellent voice in his greeting to the teachers and to the students. He was engaged as the speaker. Mrs. Lyon was an ideal after dinner speaker. Her attractive personality, her wit and humor and her fluency of language did not fail to win her audience.

Her address on "What Pass in Life" made a strong appeal to everyone present. Her final words, addressed to the graduating class, were full of inspiration and hope.

Principal Hancock was called upon and responded in his usual delightful manner. He reviewed briefly the work of the school year, emphasizing the success of the extra-curricular activities.

He expressed his pleasure at the result of the Alumni Scholarship Fund and emphasized its value in that it had been the means of keeping one deserving at Bethel in school the past year. Prof. Henson appealed to the alumni and friends of the school who were able to give individual scholarships. He urged everyone to make himself a committee of one to locate and assist a deserving student.

He presented his plan for seeing so many former students present and the desire that these annual gatherings might be more largely attended.

He closed by saying that the party had been a very successful one and that the school was proud to have had such a large number of alumni and friends present.

He then turned the floor over to the students and the exercises were closed.

BETHEL AND VICINITY

Francis DeFoe Mills was granted the degree of Bachelor of Science in Education at the Boston University School of Education at the annual commencement, Tuesday of this week.

E. R. Bowdoin of Lubec has been appointed as the new superintendent of schools to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of F. E. Russell. It is expected that Mr. Bowdoin will come to Bethel about July 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Elwyn Parlin and children, who have spent the past six years in China, expect to arrive in Bethel Saturday. While here they will be the guests of Mr. Parlin's mother and sister, Mrs. Angie Parlin and Mrs. John Anderson.

Mrs. Lizzie Yates of Los Angeles, Calif., came to Bethel last Saturday and will spend the summer in the East visiting relatives. Mrs. Yates is in Montreal now, visiting her sister and family.

Mrs. A. F. Copeland has returned from Massachusetts where she passed the winter and is at her home on Chapman Street. She was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Charles Manney, of New Brunswick.

Mrs. A. D. Forbes went to Rumford Monday where she submitted to surgery for the removal of tonsils. Her mother, Mrs. Walter Chandler of West Sumner, is staying at the home of Mrs. Forbes during her absence.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kelley of Cambridge, Mass., were week end guests of his sister, Mrs. Herman Robertson. Little Miss Mary Robertson returned with them for a two weeks visit with her grandmother at Winchester, Mass.

Miss Ruby Collier was given a surprise variety shower on the evening of June 12 at the home of Mrs. Charles Benn, in honor of her approaching marriage to Guy Perkins. She was the recipient of many lovely gifts. Refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

and Howard B. Balch of Portland. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Coburn and friends.

The table was prettily decorated with white crepe baskets filled with colored mints. A wedding cake, a gift of the bride's aunt, Margaret Mizell of Rumford, was cut by the bride. The bride and groom left after the reception for a few days honeymoon. Their destination was unknown. The bride's trousseau was a silk ensemble of navy blue and tan crepe with accessories to match.

The gift to the bride from the bridegroom was a white gold wrist watch and the bride's gift to the groom was a white gold watch chain. The bride presented her maid of honor with a crystal necklace while the pianist received a silk handkerchief case. The bridegroom's gift to the best man was a masonic emblem cuff links.

Mrs. Blake is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Coburn of this town. She was born in Bethel and attended the local schools, graduating from Gould Academy in 1926. She is a member of Sunset Rebekah Lodge and is a highly respected and popular young lady in the community. She has been the guest of honor at several showers at which time she received many pretty and useful gifts of silver, linen, glass and checks. Mr. Blake is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Millard Blake of East Bethel and received his education in his home town. He is a 32nd degree Mason, a member of St. Albans Commandery. He is employed by the American Radiator Co. of Portland. The young couple will reside at Portland where they will start housekeeping on their return from the wedding trip.

Death Valley in Java

Exudes Poison Gases

For years travelers in Java have told of a "death valley" on the slopes of the volcano of Tangkuban Prahlo. The bottom of this valley, so they report, is paved with the skeletal remains of birds and lizards, and, according to some, even the skeletons of a few venturesome human beings who dropped dead there or staggered out of the fatal howl only to die on its rim. This valley has now been definitely located by the chemist of the volcanological survey of the Dutch East Indies.

The Java valley, says Dr. H. G. Free, seems to deserve its name, for incandescent vents in its bottom have been discovered by the chemists to be discharging not only carbon dioxide gas, which displaces the oxygen of the air and might suffocate the unwary, but also a still deadlier poison, hydrogen sulphide gas. This compound is the evil-smelling gas given off by rotten eggs. In the small traces set from such decaying substances, or as used in equally small amounts in chemical laboratories, the gas is not seriously dangerous. And Java's deadly valley is no exception. However, as much as 10 per cent of this gaseous poison in the air—enough to poison any creature that breathes it for more than a few seconds.—Pittsburgh Magazine.

Magpie and Telephone
Telephone service between Melbourne and Albany, Australia, suddenly stopped recently and it was found that a magpie was the cause of the trouble. The bird had built a nest on the top of a pole, and helped intent on making it durable and solid, snipped off several pieces of wire which had been left on the ground by repair men. One of the pieces was in contact with two of the wires of the line, causing a short circuit.

Hard to Find
He was very old, but passionately attached to the royal and ancient game. The more he played, however, the more inaccurate became his strokes, and his play generally was worse and worse as time went on.

Finally, after missing the ball 15 times in succession on one occasion he turned to the patient caddy and remarked:

"Dear, dear! I suppose there can't be any worse players than myself."

"Well," returned the caddy consolingly, "there may be worse players, but, of course they don't play."

The Appointed Place

The big business man had died and gone to—well, not to heaven. But hardly had he settled down for a nice long smoke when a hearty hand slapped him on the back, and into his ear boomed the voice of a persistent salesman who had pestered him much on earth.

"Well, Mr. Smith," exclaimed the salesman, "I'm here for the appointment."

"What appointment?"

"Why, don't you remember? The salesman went on. "Every time I came into your office you told me you'd see me here!"

Thou and You
A reader asks "when and by whom was the plain language, thee and thou, changed to you when speaking to a single person?" We can only say, that the change was brought about by public usage. If one were to adhere strictly to the laws of grammar, then one should still address a single person as thou instead of you, and some people do this yet, but the ordinary custom has become to drop the second person singular, even when only one person is addressed, and to use the second person plural. There is no law of any kind requiring this, it is simply the custom.—Exchange.

Rites of Baptism
Immersion is unquestionably the most ancient form of Christian baptism. The word "baptism" is derived from the Greek "baptizo" or "baptize," literally meaning to immerse, bathe, or wash. Baptism in the Latin or Roman Catholic church was originally by immersion. That method prevailed until about the twelfth century. In some places, individual Catholic churches continued to baptize by immersion until only a few hundred years ago. According to the ritual now authorized by the Catholic church, baptism is performed by having the candidate's head.—Exchange.

Like Dipping your Brush in the RAINBOW

IT'S not just the marvelous self-leveling, smooth-covering quality of Bay State Inorout Enamel that makes our customers so wild about it. It's not just the 4-hour drying and long-wearing marvel of it, either. It's because they never saw such colors in enamel before. It's truly like dipping your brush in the rainbow!

Dan Hill was at his farm in Greenwood Monday to see his cattle and turn out a horse. Mrs. Charles Marshall spent the day at South Paris recently. The children are all glad school is closed and they can enjoy the coming months. Marian Hill is at Locke's Mills camp for a week.

Nice Distinctions as to "Why" of Whistling

Whistling is the boy's own music, according to the Springfield Republican. It is as natural for him to whistle as it is for a bird to sing—although the music is not always as melodious. But whistling, like other practices, is restrained in society by unwritten rules of etiquette. It is interesting to view this subject from the standpoint of manners.

A boy reprehended, a servant dismissed, goes away whistling, if he dares. He wishes to express contempt, and he succeeds, at least, in enraging his master generally. A hobbler who commits some breach of the proprieties commonly bursts into a whistle. This is to save his face, meaning no harm; but it signifies "I don't care!" which is just the reverse of the apology needed. At best it shows indifference; at worst, as the dulcet feel, in suit and provocation.

Boswell tells a little story of whistling illustrating the independent significance. Johnson and he were dining with the duke of Argyll, who asked a man present to fetch some curiosity from another room. He brought the wrong article, and the duke sent him back.

The exact position of this man to his host is undisclosed. However, Boswell says, "He could not refuse, but to avoid any appearance of servility he whistled as he went out of the room. On my mentioning this afterward to Doctor Johnson he said it was a nice trait of character." Boswell grasped with ease the objection, which is unintelligible to some persons.

Schools closed here Wednesday, June 12, after a successful year taught by Miss Briggs, grammar, and Miss Bean, primary room. Monday night a fine time was enjoyed by the grammar room when 20 of the scholars were given a ride in W. G. Holt's truck to Miss Briggs' home in West Paris, then a picnic supper and hike. Tuesday night graduation exercises were held at the Grange Hall where a fine program was presented. Wednesday, the last day, was picnic day, some going on Kimball Hill where a fire was made, and some on the lake and hot dog roast was enjoyed by the children, the older ones going to Locke's Mills pond fishing. All are in hopes of seeing the same teachers back again in the fall.

SOUTH WATERFORD

Mrs. A. A. Monroe and Ethel returned home Friday after pleasant visits in Melrose and Westford, Mass., where they had some delightful motor trips. E. A. Monroe of Melrose and his friends, Arthur Roche of Melrose and David Babcock of Wakefield, Mass., accompanied the Monroes home. The men spent three days fishing.

Mrs. Alfretha Abbott is able to get about the house after her bad fall.

The schools of town closed on Friday with a very happy day and appropriate exercises in observance of Flag Day. The program was given in Grange Hall beginning at 9:30 A. M. A fine dinner and lemonade were served free to the children at 12 o'clock. Parents and friends were served at 12:30. Mrs. Alfretha L. Sanborn, Mrs. Ethel Bell and Mrs. Charles Chaplin were at the head of the dinner committee and many of the mothers assisted. They reported about 270 were served. Fine exhibits of school work were shown in the school rooms. The afternoon sports were enjoyed under the direction of Rev. W. L. Dahl.

LAKEWOOD PLAYERS TO GIVE TWO MATINEE PERFORMANCES

Turning from their policy of offering evening performances only, The Lakewood Players at the famous resort at Skowhegan are to appear for two special matinees within the next two weeks. Persons in this part of the state who have been prevented from seeing this noted dramatic organization in action on account of the long drive after the performance at night will have an opportunity to make a leisurely trip to the popular theatrical resort.

The first matinee will be offered on Monday, June 24th, the play being the famous James Gleason comedy sketch of last season, "The Shamrock of Broadway," requiring one of the best comedians of the season and having excellent singing and dancing thrills through its novel plot.

The second matinee is on Thursday, July 4th, at which time, "Intervene," the widely popular melodrama brought to this country last year by Gilbert Miller, will be presented on an all star cast. This play ran for two performances at the famous Elmer Theatre, New York.

Both matinees will be offered at 2 o'clock Standard Time and the price of all tickets is one dollar.

Tip for Tax
Down dropped the policeman's arm and immediately the traffic stream was in motion, one car shooting on in front of the other vehicles.

At that moment a pretty girl made an indiscreet dash for an island in the center of the roadway.

She would have been knocked down by the swiftly moving car had not the driver jammed on his brakes.

"Women and donkeys are always in the way!" he shrieked furiously at the girl.

"Glad to see you're the man to put yourself last!" retorted the girl coolly.

Fountain Gushes Wine
In the town of Marino in the Roman Campagna there is a fountain which occasionally flows with wine, once an hour in the vintage season and each year the thrifty may freely fill their pitchers.

The custom of free wine is an old one. In the market place near by stands a gigantic basket filled with clusters of grapes. Its diameter almost as great as that of a small down gas tank. The basket belongs to the town and whatever of its contents is left is made into wine for the free fountain in the following day. Great crowds gather for the celebration.

Dropping From the Air
All the knowledge and ability of the aviator is called into play when he undertakes to come to earth. He must remember all he has ever learned, and there are about as many "dots" as "dots" for him to follow.

There are a thousand things likely to happen when a machine is about to reach land and the aviator must be prepared to meet any one of these emergencies. It is essential that he should know the exact direction of the wind and make his descent square into it. It is fatal to stall the engine at this stage of the flight. The gentle art of landing is particularly trying to the beginner.

Busy Human Heart
The adult heart—the only organ in the body whose muscles never rest nor sleep during life—makes an average total of 100,000 beats every 24 hours. How does the busy organ find time to "rest" and fortify itself for its arduous labors?

Prof. Y. Kato of the Okazaki Medical College, Japan, says in Popular Science Monthly that nature has provided what he described as little "finger galls" from which the muscles fibers of the heart are ingeniously "fed." These "galls" are tiny, disk-like organs between the muscle fibers, and their duty is to collect food materials from the blood and pass them around to the heart muscles.

Bobbing Bobby's Locks

By MAY MARSH
(Copyright.)

"TOM, dear," said Tom's sister as Tom appeared home from the office early one Saturday afternoon, "I'm so glad you came home. I've been delayed so, and Bobby's hair is disgracefully long. Grandpa Alden is coming tomorrow—it would never do. He is a dear and take Bobby down to Stirling's and have his hair bobbed."

"Oh, all right," said Tom. "I'd planned to play golf—but all right." There was nothing very amiable in Tom's voice, nor did he look more amiable when his married sister called him "a sweet angel of a brother."

The barber shop at Stirling's children's store was crowded as usual on Saturday afternoon, and Tom found that he would have to take a number at the desk and remain in the waiting room adjoining the barber shop.

Presently a portly, gray-haired woman hustled into the room, a slender young girl of eighteen or so in her wake. The older woman regarded the others waiting rather disapprovingly.

"I simply can't wait," she said, looking appealingly around the room for sympathy. "My theater tickets. I've ordered them for tonight, and they'll only hold them at the box office until four. I can't wait—and yet—here she looked with a sigh at her young charge—'Annabelle needs a bob frightfully.'"

The aunt's eyes had been wandering about the waiting room. She caught sight of Tom Alden, eyed him briefly through her spectacles and then called over to him.

"I'm going to ask a favor of you," she began. "I simply can't wait with my niece, and you look as if you could be trusted. After you have your little bob bobbed, will you wait and see that they do Annabelle properly. I don't think we those awful things at the back of the neck." She pointed to a seat rather shyly beside Tom, and he nodded assent.

"Annabelle is very nervous," she said. "She seemed to think you were an old boy or so. Then there was a pause. 'Isn't your little boy coming?'"

They waited fifteen minutes for Bobby's turn, and then Annabelle followed him into the barber shop and sat beside Tom while Tom gave the barber directions concerning Bobby's haircut.

Then they returned to the waiting room and waited fifteen minutes more until Annabelle was singled and waved.

"It's very becoming," Tom told his charge, when the process was over. "I never liked bobbed hair on girls very much, but it looks great on you."

"Isn't your wife near bobbed hair, Mr.?"

"Alden—Tom Alden," supplied Tom. And then: "My wife? Why, I haven't any wife."

"But Bobby's mother is she dead?" Her eyes were wide with youthful curiosity.

Tom laughed. "His mother is my sister. Why, I'm just a youngster; only been out of college a year."

They were back in the waiting room and had taken their seats to await the return of the much-sought aunt, Mrs. Weston. In ten minutes came a telephone message, by means of jangling, saying that Mrs. Weston had had to go to her dressmaker's. She had forgotten that she had an appointment, and would the gentleman be so good as to take a taxi and bring the niece down to the Coolidge hotel, where the aunt would meet the niece—for tea.

Then Tom remembered that he had arranged with his sister to meet her at the Ardmore at tea time. She was to be downtown and would take Bobby off her brother's hands then. So Tom managed to telephone to his sister asking her to change the rendezvous from the Ardmore to the Coolidge.

Tom and Annabelle felt like old friends when they entered the palm room at the Coolidge where they were to meet. To their surprise they found Mrs. Weston and Tom's sister already seated, so busy in conversation that they did not see Tom and Annabelle and Bobby until they had taken seats beside them.

"Tom, it's perfectly thrilling. Here's mother's old friend Mrs. Weston. You've heard her speak of Helen Weston? I don't even know she was in town, and now I happen to run into her old friend waiting for you."

Introductions were followed with rather confusion and it was not until tea was served that the next sighted Mrs. Weston became quite clear in her mind that Tom Alden was not the son of her old friend, and that he was not the substantial middle-aged man that her non-distant eye had told her he was at first.

She looked later, after an ardent exchange of glances and Tom and Annabelle's introduction. Mrs. Weston looked with self-satisfaction at the first. "I rather flatter myself that it hasn't been for me this while would never have come off."

And Tom's sister smiled to herself and her friends when she spoke of the matter. "Annabelle is just the sort of girl I always wanted Tom to marry. I am so pleased to think that it was I who introduced them."

WATERFORD

Miss Mabel Gage and Miss Carrie L. Plummer, who have spent the winter in Miss Gage's winter home in California, arrived in Waterford last week.

Prof. Myron T. Townsend of the Oklahoma University with his wife and child are spending a few days at the parsonage with Dr. Townsend's parents. They will spend most of the summer in the Adirondacks where Dr. Townsend will do research work for the Roosevelt Wild Life Commission. This will be his third season spent in this work in that region.

Flag Day is annually observed by the Waterford schools. It has not been possible every year to observe it on June 14th, but on some near date that would accommodate the schools. This year, however, the closing day of the schools came on June 14th, and very interesting exercises were held by the various schools of the town in the Grange Hall at South Waterford. At the exercises by the various schools, Supt. Edminister conferred certificates of graduation to eight boys and girls who have completed the eighth grade work. A dinner was then served to the children and afterward to their friends.

Jacobite Toast

When through an oversight no Jacobite toast follow your dinner. Just be philosophical, remember that for 313 years the British royal family got along somehow without them. But it was far from an oversight with the kings and queens of Britain. After the exile in 1688 of James the Old Pretender, the Jacobites, his adherents, instituted the clever custom of lifting the glasses in such a manner as to bring them over their finger bowls, and so were in reality toasting the "king over the water." Suddenly finger bowls were conspicuous by their absence and the Jacobites knew their deception was detected. It was not until Edward VII began reigning in 1901 that the bowls reappeared.—Detroit News.

Oxford County United Parish

Embracing Albany, North Lovell, Stoneham and the Waterford. Pastoral Staff: Revs. W. L. Bull, B. F. Wentworth, A. C. Townsend.

Rev. W. L. Bull is absent on his vacation. He and his family will spend a part of the month at Billerica, Mass., with Mr. Bull's parents, then attend the Conference of Rural Church Workers at Ocean Park, after which they will visit Mrs. Bull's parents and their former parish at Ashland, Maine.

There were two interesting Children's Days in the Parish last week. On Friday the schools of Waterford observed Flag Day as their closing program. All the schools of the town gathered at South Waterford Grange Hall where an interesting program was carried out, closing with the conferring by the superintendent of certificates of graduation upon those boys and girls who had completed the eighth grade work. An exhibit of the work of the schools was displayed. A dinner was served to the school children, and afterward to the parents and friends. Field sports were engaged in in the afternoon.

On Saturday the school children of Albany gathered at the Grange Hall at Hunt's Corner where interesting exercises were held.

Last Monday the Norway-South Paris Ministers' Association held its meeting at the Moulton cottage on the shore of one of the Five Keekar Ponds. A picnic dinner was eaten, games of volleyball played, and a brief program carried out.

Rev. B. F. Wentworth has been very busy of late giving religious instruction in the public schools of Albany. By this means many who cannot or do not receive religious training in any Sunday School can receive it.

The men of Waterford last week completed the organization of a Fire Company by adopting a constitution and electing officers. The officers are: Chief, Earl Libby; First Assistant, Fred Hersey; Second Assistant, Winfield Perkins; Secretary-Treasurer B. F. Wentworth. The fire signals are to be the church bell rung continuously; telephones rung every half minute; the mill whistle blown when possible.

Next Sunday the first "All the Parish" service will be held at Hunt's Corner, Albany. Mr. Henry Merrill of Portland will be present with his Men's Class from St. Lawrence Church. This is coming to be an annual event looked forward to by the whole Parish. The time will be 10 a. m. Standard Time. The service will be held out of doors, if weather permits. All regular morning services in the Parish will be merged in this one.

Anti-Fire Brigade

Who are the fire fighters of the insect world?

Tests carried out by a French woman scientist, Mme. Marguerite Combes, have proved that red ants organize themselves into fire brigades and are able to extinguish flames by the application of formic acid.

When Mme. Combes placed a lighted cigarette on an ant hill, the alarm was given immediately, and the insect firemen set about their task successfully. The experiment was repeated several times with the same result, and a heated paper was also extinguished. Finally a lighted candle was used, and this was put out in about a minute.

When ants were in danger of burning, they were dragged to safety by their companions.

SCHOOLS ADOPTING PRESSURE COOKER

Proves Solution of Rural School Children's Warm Lunch Problem.

Getting a hot dish for the children's lunch in rural school, is a problem that has been worked on by parents, teachers and school boards alike, because they all realize how much good this can do the children, especially in severe weather.

Its simple solution is found when a pressure cooker is added to the school equipment, because in this way the food can be prepared quickly, inexpensively and without adding a lot of extra work and responsibility to the teacher.

Soup is one of the best hot dishes to serve because it takes the place of a beverage and at the same time affords a great deal of nourishment. The bowl of soup should, of course, be supplemented by the child's own lunch box from home, with its sandwich, fruit and nuts. Bake beans are also good cooked this way.

Before the close of school the teacher will ask some three or four children to bring some one item each to contribute to the soup-pot—a soup bone, a vegetable chopped up, some beans soaked overnight, or whatever tomorrow's soup may call for. The parents' co-operation must first be won before this program can be started, and then care must be taken to see that the children are called off for supplies in rotation. Staples such as salt and other seasonings can be kept on hand.

In the morning the ingredients are placed immediately in the cooker and thirty minutes before the soup is to be served the pressure cooker is put on the fire—over the stove if there is no other heat available. By using the pressure cooker soup which would otherwise require several hours simmering can be prepared in half an hour and all the mineral salts and vitamins will be preserved instead of boiled away.

The resourceful teacher will have no difficulty in getting the children interested in helping and will make this an opportunity to teach them lessons in co-operation and personal responsibility as well as the more concrete lessons of simple cooking, the elements of food chemistry and the necessity for right eating. The increased alertness and attentiveness of her well-nourished pupils will more than repay the costs and effort involved.

NO ODOR TO FISH COOKED WITH A PRESSURE COOKER

The sensible woman gives her family fish at least once a week, both in the interests of variety and because it is rich in mineral salts, phosphorus and calcium, which are builders of bone and teeth. From the housewife's point of view the chief objection to cooking fish is the odor which she is accustomed to associating with it.

These difficulties, according to the National School of Pressure Cooking, are overcome by cooking the fish in a pressure cooker. There will be no odor, either escaping into the room or affecting other food in the cooker at the same time. Furthermore, all the delicate flavor is retained as well as the life-giving mineral salts, and the flakes will be sold tender. Much of this is due to the brief space of time required for cooking under pressure, which also means a considerable fuel economy. Again, many of the tiny bones which are apt to make fish eating a wary occupation are so gelatinized by being cooked in this way that they can be safely eaten without troubling them.

Any fish which you could normally bake is better done in your pressure cooker. First see that it is thoroughly clean. Then season and wrap in a strip of clean cheesecloth and place in the inner dish of the cooker. Peeled potatoes may be put in the same dish. Fill the cooker with warm water up to the rack, put in the inner dish and fasten the cover properly in position. For three pounds of fish cook 12 to 15 minutes at 15 lbs. pressure, and your fish is perfectly done and ready to serve.

A complete and well balanced meal of fish, potatoes, buttered beans and steamed apple pudding can be prepared in a pressure cooker at one time.

Swedish Superstition

One of the strangest superstitions is that believed by some in Sweden that when a man dies after having been a faithful husband his shirt goes to heaven with him. If the wife dies first and the widower is married again he must destroy his first shirt on the eve of his second wedding. Regarding the assumption that there is no good reason why a shirt that has given long and faithful service should not be permitted to accompany its master to eternal reward, the origin of this superstition probably is to be found in the Viking burial custom that called for the warrior's incensement in his best battle clothes, for it was assumed that he would need them—even in Valhalla.

A Good Advertisement is an advertisement that has been carefully prepared and gives information about the goods offered for sale in an interesting and instructive way.

It isn't necessary to quote a cut price, to write an advertisement. In fact the majority of the good advertisements do not feature a cut price. They do show, however, that the article being offered for sale is worth the money asked for it and that it will be to the reader's distinct advantage to own it.

A well written advertisement influences readers until they want to buy. They want to buy the goods offered and they want to buy them from the merchant who advertises them.

A well written advertisement is a good salesman for the merchant who uses it.
